PETITION

We the Kansas Citizens and Taxpayers do hereby request to maximize the use of E-Verify in Private Businesses and Government Contractors; stop the provisions of benefits to illegal aliens such as food stamps, welfare, housing, medical (other than hospital emergencies), and stop in-state tuition for illegal immigrants. We want a statutory requirement that Kansas police officers check immigration status of aliens during traffic violation stops.

National Data | January Jobs: Half of New Jobs Go To Immigrants—96% (!) To Hispanics

On Topic

January's Jobs/ Unemployment data [1] has been greeted with euphoria by the Democratic Party/ Main Stream Media (to the extent that the two can be distinguished). Example:

Jobs jump: A 2012 game-changer? [2]

By Alexander Burns [3] and Ben White [4], Politico.com. February 3, 2010

President Barack Obama [5] hasn't unfurled a "Mission Accomplished" banner just yet.

But Friday's jobs report [6] showing unemployment dropping to 8.3 percent, the lowest level of his presidency, is an unexpected boon for Obama's reelection bid and a serious hurdle for his top competitor, Mitt Romney [7], who has staked his campaign on a jobs-and-economy message.

January was indeed a "game changer"—but not in the way portrayed. The displacement of American workers by immigrants (and of all races [8] by Hispanics) reached unprecedented levels.

U.S. companies hired 243,000 workers—the most in nine months. The U.S. unemployment rate fell to 8.3% according to the government's survey of employers—the lowest level in nearly three years. After months of better than expected gains, this surprised even the most cockeyed optimist.

But VDARE.com's analysis starts with "other" employment survey, of households rather than businesses [9]. The Household Survey [10] is rarely headlined in the MSM. To do so would reveal inconvenient truths about the race, ethnicity, and nativity of new "American" workers.

According to the Household Survey, an astounding 847,000 jobs were added in January—the largest monthly gain in nine years.

That's the good news. The not-so-good, or at least thought-provoking, news: an astonishing 96% of those jobs went to Hispanics—although they are only 15% [11] of the workforce.

VDARE.com's original American Worker Displacement Index, which we now call VDAWDI Classic, compared Hispanic and non-Hispanic job growth [12] since January 2001 as a proxy for immigrant displacement of American workers [12]. Just look at the January 2012 pop in Hispanic employment:

In January 2012:

- Total employment rose 847,000 (+0.60 percent)
- non-Hispanic employment rose 33,000 (+0.03 percent)
- Hispanic employment rose 814,000 (+3.93 percent)

In percentage terms, Hispanic employment grew 131 times faster than non-Hispanic employment. The brutal explanation: Hispanics, immigrant and native-born, are systematically more willing to work for less [13].

Hispanic employment is interesting, but of course it was just a proxy for our primary interest: the displacement of native-born workers by immigrants. Our analysis of the Household Survey indicates that 414,000, or 49%, of January's new jobs went to immigrants. That is more than three times their share of the labor force (16%). Native-born employment grew by 433,000.

Immigrant employment grew by 1.83% in January. Native-born employment grew by 0.37%. At these rates, immigrant employment will double in just 39 months, while native-born employment will take 196 months to double. That's 16 years.

Since January 2009—the month Barack Obama took office [14]—data on foreign- and native-born employment has been included in the monthly employment report. Coincidence or not, this means we can piece together the monthly points to track the long-term impact of Mr. Obama's policies.

To calculate our New VDARE.com American Worker Displacement Index (NVDAWDI) [15], we set native-born and immigrant employment when President Obama assumed office [14] in January 2009 at 100 each. From that January to this January immigrant employment rose by 6.6%—pushing the immigrant employment index up to 106.6. Over the same period, native-born employment declined by 1.7%, reducing the native employment index to 98.3. We then take the ratio of immigrant to native-born employment indexes and multiply by 100.

Bottom line: the January 2012 NVDAWDI is 108.4—or 100 times 106.6 divided by 98.3.

Obama's Legacy: Foreign-born v. Native Born
Employment Growth, Jan. 2009-Jan. 2012

(Jan. 2009=100.0; BLS data)

NVDAWDI (the yellow line) spiked to an Obama-era record in January.

Resurgent American worker displacement is also confirmed by comparing the seasonally unadjusted figures for January 2011 and January 2012.

Source: BLS, "The Employment Situation - January 2012," February 3, 2012. Table A-7. PDF <sup>[16]</sup>

Over the past 12 months:

- Immigrants gained 875000 jobs, a 4.0% increase; native-born workers gained 1,470,000 positions, a 1.3% increase. ADVANTAGE IMMIGRANTS
- The foreign-born working age population increased by 3.6%; the comparable native population increased by 1.1%. ADVANTAGE IMMIGRANTS
- The unemployment rate for immigrants fell by 1.2 percentage points; the rate for immigrants fell by 0.9 percentage points. ADVANTAGE IMMIGRANTS
- The immigrant labor force increased by 2.6%; the native-born labor force increased by 0.2%. ADVANTAGE IMMIGRANTS

At VDARE.com, we've been following immigrant displacement of native-born American workers for over seven years. Of course, it's a scandal that in that time the concept has not become part of the MSM labor reporting template—we don't require credit. I urge VDARE.com readers to point this out in MSM comment threads. Let us know <sup>[17]</sup> if you're censored. But the ultimate question is: why has no GOP Presidential candidate raised the question <sup>[18]</sup>—especially as they have no other ideas <sup>[19]</sup> about reducing unemployment.
